Olmsted 200 is a national campaign honoring the visionary founder of American landscape architecture, Frederick Law Olmsted, whose trailblazing work literally changed the face of the country. Marking the 200th anniversary of Olmsted’s birth, the campaign will educate wide and diverse audiences about Olmsted’s democratic values, designs and enduring influence. It will explore his commitment to public parks, comprehensive system-wide planning, and the mental and physical health benefits of access to nature, helping ensure that FLO’s legacy lives on for the next 200 years.

Whether engaging with the media, creating social posts, writing an op-ed or planning a program or event, the following resources can help you talk about the Olmsted 200 Campaign and answer any questions that come your way:
